

A Student Perspective | Bryanna's Story

I really appreciate how my teacher helped me to change my perspective on a classmate I wasn't getting along with, by teaching me that judging someone just by how they act without getting to know them, is wrong. They didn't just speak it, but helped me to do it by being vulnerable and taking time to share stories from their own school experience about how their teacher helped them work through difficult relationships. This helped me to see that I was not alone in dealing with difficult relationships and that my teacher could be trusted to help me since they had already experienced similar situations and came out as friends.

A Patron Perspective | Donishia's Story

It was such a pleasure to meet Bryanna's new teacher Mr. Parson. In the past we have had many discussions about her being a "chatty patty" during class. The greatest part about us getting her back on track was his approach to us asking that we assist her in staying focused. After we all came together as teacher, parents, and student, Bryanna definitely did a 360. This made me happy to know that working together still exists amongst staff and families. Being a part of our children's education and scholastic studies is truly a blessing. The staff is in constant communication with us when things are going well and need work.
